Brought to you by

Ross Fisher and Zedu are teaming up again to bring you p cubed presentations.

p cubed presentations will help you deliver presentations that inspire, engage and motivate.

p cubed presentations - Improving the world, one presentation at a time

Be the difference.

Presentations are supposed to be designed to inspire and teach us or effectively communicate ideas and information, yet this is rarely the case.

The way a presentation is constructed can often limit its success.

A p cubed presentation workshop will show you how to construct and deliver engaging and successful presentations based on educational and psychological science.

About Ross Fisher

I'm a Consultant Paediatric Surgeon working in The Sheffield Children's Hospital, Sheffield, England. I specialise in Surgical Oncology, Neonatal Surgery and Trauma and I'm proud to be a Visiting Lecturer at the Virtual Hospital of St Emyln's in Virchester, part of the FOAM community.

I do a lot of teaching, mentoring and giving presentations. I see how valuable presentations are in education, management and research but also how ineffective they usually are. None of the skills I use professionally are intrinsic or natural, they are taught and practised and assessed and improved, slowly, over time. Yet presentation skills appear to be something we believe can simply be copied.

Understanding the value of the information we share and the dreadful nature of its delivery I recognised that I could help by sharing and coaching ideas about presentation skills.

What started as simple advice to colleagues has expanded over the years to encompass a blog, lectures, workshops and seminars on the p cubed concept around the world, and I'm currently working up a book. Through Twitter (I'm @ffolliet) and the hashtags #htdap and #presentationsskills I have gained a humbling reputation principally because of presentations.

Presentations have changed my life.

Outside all of that, I struggle to keep fit, cycle a bit and do the odd triathlon. I'm a father, singer, laughter, learner, sharer, blogger, thinker and much more.

Join me in Perth, Melbourne or Sydney in March 2019 and be part of the p cubed family

- Ross
